Chapter 1 by Story Wars

I really don't know what all the fuss is about concerning the HSBC scandal. That Ed Miliband can be quite horrid at times, and has no right to pick on my chums at the HMRC! When will that Miliband learn that I don't have to answer his questions, because I'm the Prime-minister, and can do whatever the hell I like.

My wife (bless her) calls it the Hilarious Scandal Befallen Cameron, and that poor people tend to forget more easily when the football season is underway!

16 / 2 / 14

Ed is really getting on my nerves quite recently, and if it's not one thing then it's another. This time Big Ed (my pet name for him) has the audacity to criticize my prized brainchild of Universal Credit. Big Ed says that it is costing too much & also disproportionate, and some other silly things that I cant remember at the moment. Big Ed just cant seem to understand that it's not disproportionate, and that Universal means Universal.

Well I made that Big Ed look stupid during question & answers viewed by millions - I told him Universal Credit distributes poverty equally among the lower classes, and its important to keep these traditions which are not only apart of our heritage, but also sponsored by the HSBC!

Why are poor people so pessimistic in this country? We release the new inflation figures for this month, and not even a street party to celebrate it being at 0.3%. Luxury food is cheaper, petrol is cheaper & even toys are cheaper, and not one bloody pat on the back from those unappreciative buggers. They deserve to stay on the minimum wage & not be able to buy luxuries, because they will never appreciate them! Ditto.

After going missing for a week and my wife discovering me bedside in a local Premier Inn still slaughtered, they tried to make me go to rehab, but I said no, no, no.
